The Becker CPA Teaching Methodology

The Best of Both Worlds

DeVry University's Keller Graduate School of Management offers a unique opportunity for students to earn graduate credit while preparing for the CPA exam. Keller's CPA Exam Preparation courses, modeled after those designed by Newton Becker, founder of the Becker CPA Review, help students prepare for the CPA exam while earning credit to meet state exam eligibility requirements*, or toward a master's degree. Credit applies toward an MBA with an accounting concentration or toward a master of accounting and financial management (MAFM) degree.

The great majority of accountants who enter public accounting continue their career by moving into corporate management positions within several years. Challenging positions will be available based on experience, contacts and education or credentials. Having both the CPA and an MBA will help you be ready for the new challenges of corporate America.

The Keller Graduate School of Management is uniquely positioned to serve the education needs of working adult students preparing for the real world. Its growing network of education centers provides unprecedented convenience and flexibility while at the same time ensuring consistent high-quality programs throughout the system.

The Keller CPA Exam Preparation Course can be taken for graduate credit either as a review for the CPA exam only or as part of a degree program at Keller Graduate School. Plan for the future. Distinguish yourself with the credentials of a professional in the 21st century.

*Varies by state. It is the student's responsibility to determine whether the courses apply to the state's mandated requirements to earn a CPA credential.
